International Experience and China's Countermeasures for Program Budget Reform

WANG Yong-jun LI Zhao-yi

Abstract: Program budget is a kind of budget system that takes financial resource allocation, aiming to guide all stakeholders in the budget to focus on the results of the expenditure instead of input. The experience of global budget reform shows that the reform from input budget to strictly performance budget generally requires the transition of program budget to create a budget structure composed of deepening reform and implementing budget performance management, China should fully absorb budget reform experience of other countries, take performance information, transform the traditional input budget into program budget and develop the corresponding administrative and technical ability, pay attention to grasp the
